Tones of Note

Music proposal – 22 March 2020

Pre-drinks and dinner:

DJ + Trumpet

A simple but effective way of entertaining guests would be for Rus to DJ with the option of live trumpet accompaniment performed by Lee Thomson.

Rus Nerwich's DJ repertoire honours the classics by incorporating soul and jazz favourites, with upbeat contemporary tracks by Gregory Porter, Erykah Badu, etc. This set can be tailored to your specific preference but will undoubtedly be upbeat and get guests to party later on, while not overwhelming conversations.

Jazz quartet

Another option, while guests enjoy pre-drinks or dinner, is for a jazz quartet featuring Rus Nerwich on saxophone accompanied by double bass, keys and drums to perform an instrumental set. The interplay between the different instrumentalists who feature on different songs, provides a variety for guests whether they are listening or not; stimulating the senses and keeping things fresh.

Ethan Florus + band

Based in Cape Town, Ethan Florus is known for his smooth, urban sound. He gets inspiration from fireplaces, night skies, long drives and whiskey on the rocks. He developed his vocal and guitar skills during the 5 years he spent at the Stellenbosch University Konservatorium. He drives his passion for the art by sharing his skills through teaching, and his music through preforming and recording.

Here are some links to Ethan performing live as a solo artist and with a band:

Dance and party set:

Then directly following the couple's first dance, the band featuring Nathan Ambach on vocals and Rus Nerwich on saxophone, accompanied by keys, bass and drums to perform a high-energy dance set, getting people on the dance floor.

Straight from the live dance set, Nathan will take over as DJ performing for the remainder of the night.
